Radio Netherlands Worldwide currently has a service in Dutch and English beamed to Europe from Wertachtal (Germany) on Monday to Friday on the familiar frequency of 5955 kHz.

Radio Netherlands Wereldomroep (RNW) had daily transmissions from Flevo in Dutch and English and also relays other broadcasters like Vatican Radio and Radio Canada International in what it calls a DRM Bouquet. RNW uses very high bit rates that can make reception difficult. RNW has also experimented with a 2 channel AAC encoded broadcast during late 2005.

From B07 RNW has moved all its broadcasts to transmitters outside the Netherlands and introduced English to the UK once more. Later the time was split between Dutch and English.
